

Teenage Texting Habits and Communication

RESULTS OF OUR PEER SURVEY

Antea Opuhač, 3.c
Leona Horvat, 3.d
Veronika Bešić, 3.d
Asja Hodžić, 3.d

Introduction and Survey Overview

Introduction and Survey Overview

GOAL:

investigate how texting changes teenage communication and language skills

TOOL:

online survey conducted via Google Forms

TARGET AUDIENCE:

teenagers aged 15-18

TOTAL PARTICIPANTS:

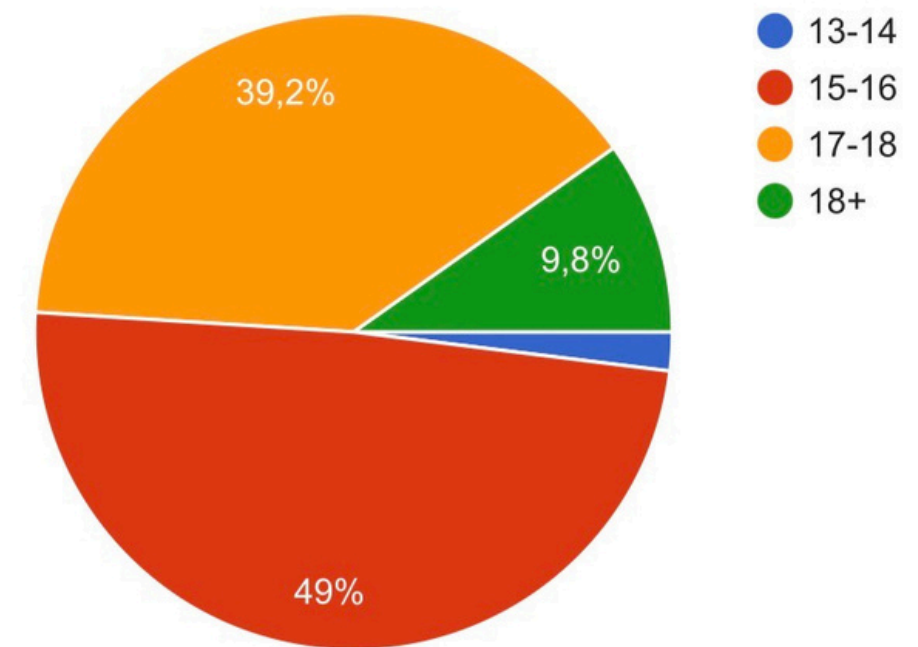

51 students

How old are you?

51 odgovor

 Kopiraj grafikon

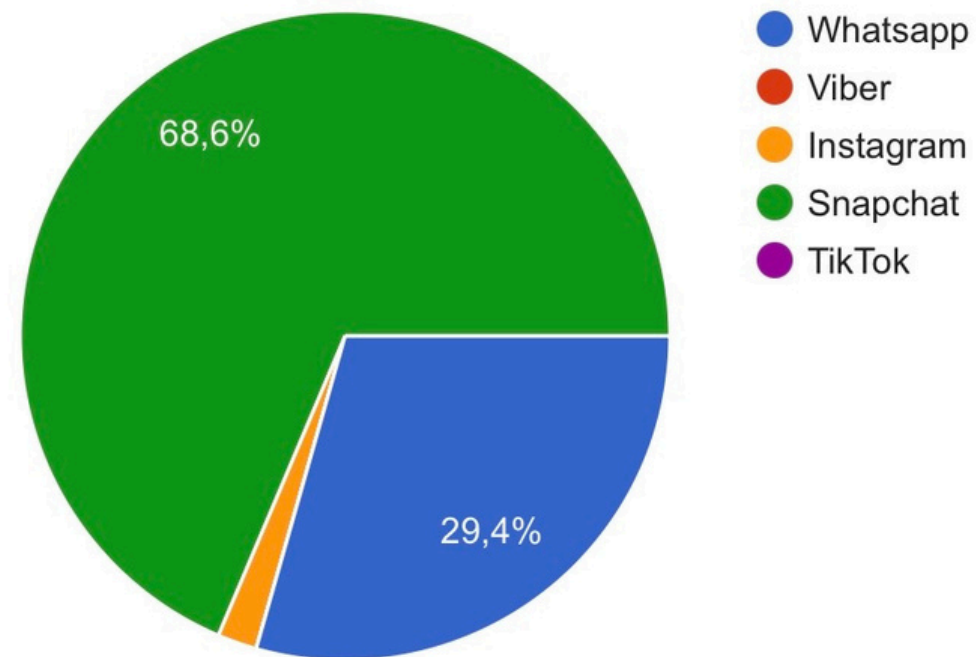

Texting habits & volume

Which app do you use most often to send messages?

51 odgovor

 Kopiraj grafikon

How many hours a day do you spend texting people?

50 odgovora

 Kopiraj grafikon

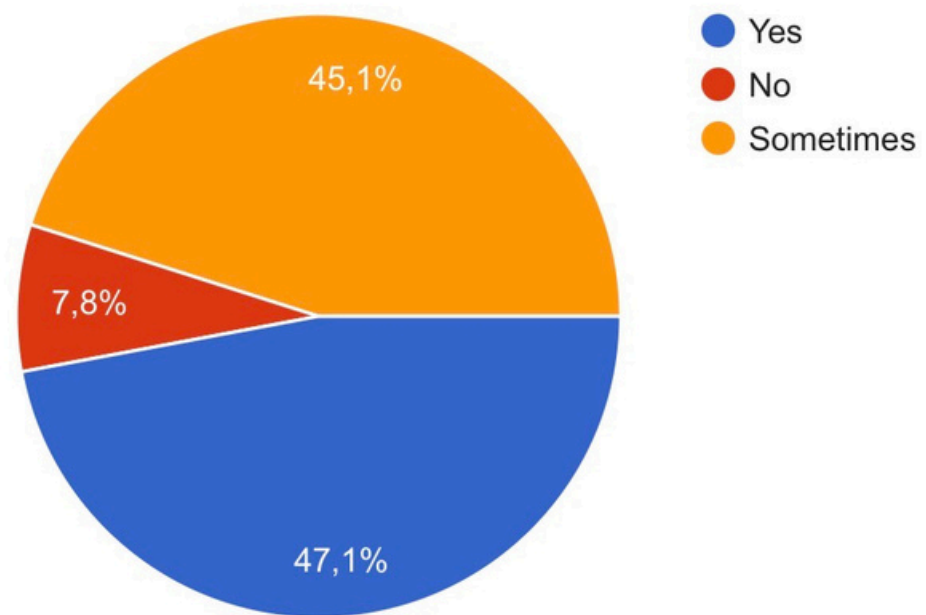

Most teens spend significant time texting daily, with Snapchat being the primary platform.

Texting habits & volume

Do you use abbreviations when texting?

51 odgovor

Kopiraj grafikon

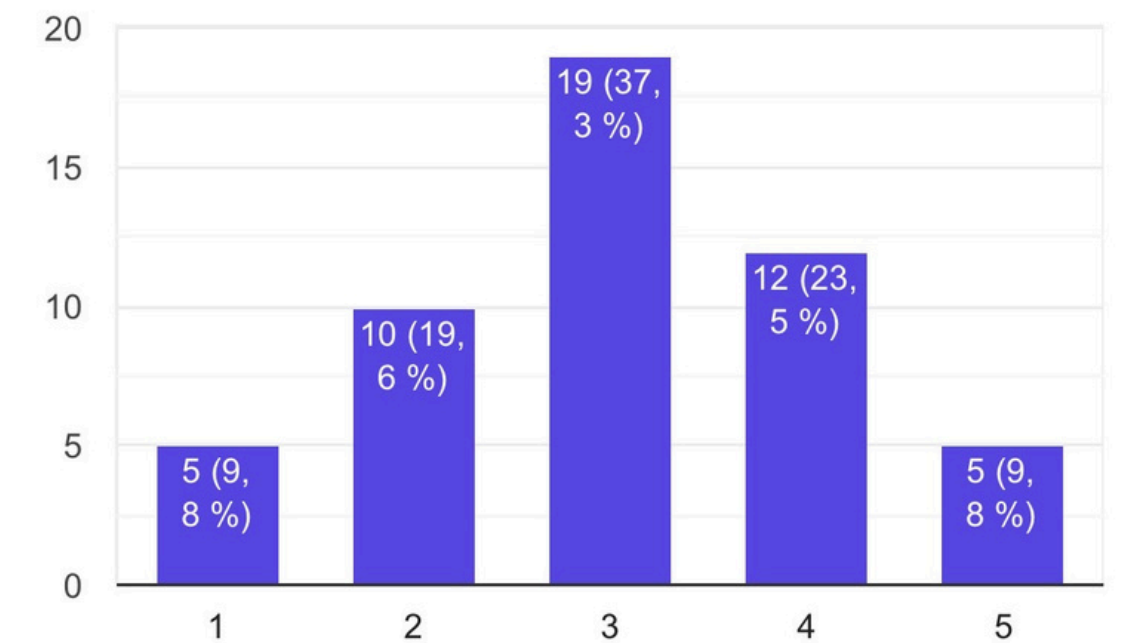

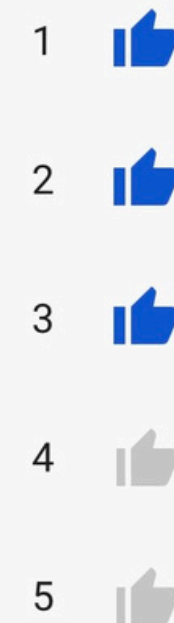

How often do you use emojis?

51 odgovor

Kopiraj grafikon

Average rating (3.04)

The vast majority of students regularly rely on short forms and abbreviations

Impact on School & Writing Skills

Impact on School & Writing Skills

NEGATIVE EFFECTS:

constant use of short forms can weaken formal grammar and lead to spelling errors

sometimes it does because we use a lot of abbreviations a sometimes we forget how to actually spell them

I think it does because they don't watch if they wrote something correctly for example someone's name or name of cities

Yes, because when we text we don't care about grammar.

POSTIVE / NEUTRAL EFFECTS:

autocorrect helps with correct spelling, and students know when to use formal VS informal language

No because they know when to use informal language with friends and formal language at school.

Depends. If they use shortened versions of the words all the time, they might forget how to actually spell it but texting can also expand someone's grammar as well.

I don't think it has negative effects, it can help with spell checks and most ppl know when they wrote something wrong

SUMMARY:

while texting speeds up communication, over-reliance on slang can make students lazy in essay writing

Impact on Social & Face-to-Face skills

ADVANTAGES:

quick connections, easy to express feelings, convenient anywhere

DISADVANTAGES:

lack of tone and body language can cause misunderstandings; reduces face-to-face interaction

Advantages: easier communication, quicker responses

Disadvantages: not knowing abbreviations, no tone to know if someone's mad at you

Advantages are getting information to people you care for, disadvantages are disappearing of words and fading of vocabulary.

The advantages are that people can reach each other way faster and communicate easier, but the disadvantage is that the eye to eye communication can often get lost.

it's quick and easy, but it makes us uneducated and ignorant

Advantage is definitely that we are connected all the time but the disadvantage is bad grammar

Advantages: easy and fast, you can text anywhere in the world, you text whenever you want.
Disadvantages: people might not see/ignore it for some time, texting can be addictive, it reduces face-to-face communication advantages are constantly being able to communicate without having to be around that person, disadvantages are that sometimes the wrong information can get to a person in quick time without it being correct and people can get addicted to texting.

SUMMARY:

texting keeps people connected, but face-to-face conversation quality can suffer

Team conclusion

Team conclusion

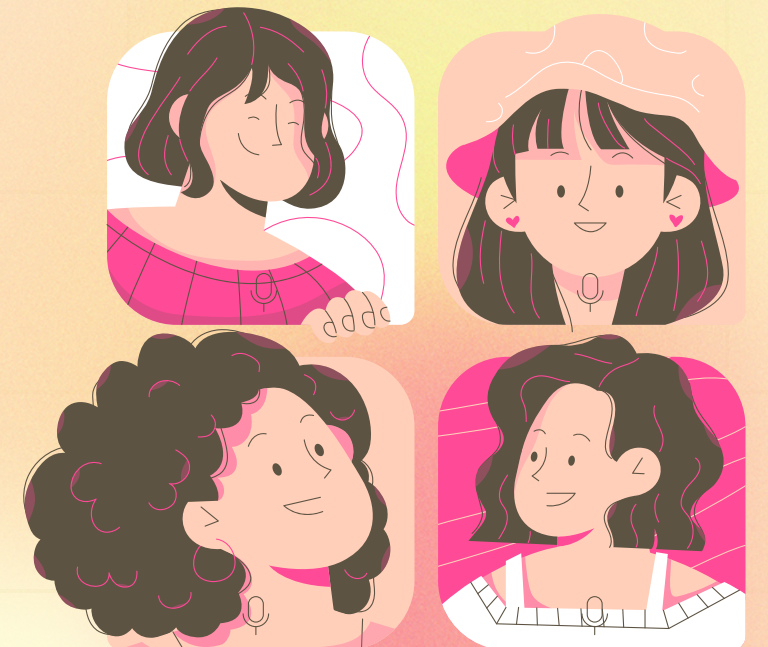

Does texting help or hurt language skills?

OUR OPINION: texting is a powerful tool for staying connected, but balance is essential

- while slang and abbreviations offer quick communication, students must stay aware of formal language rules for school and future writing

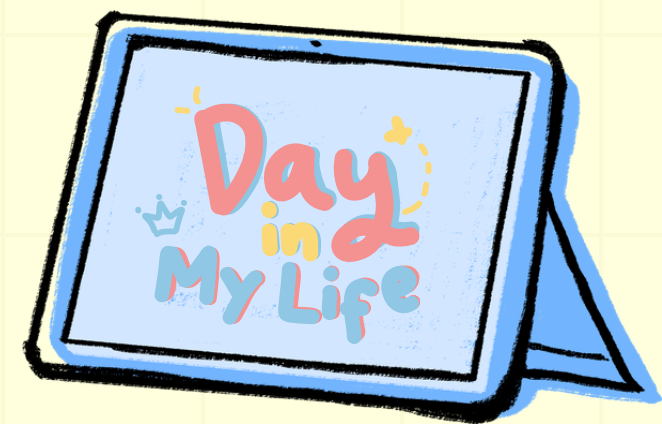

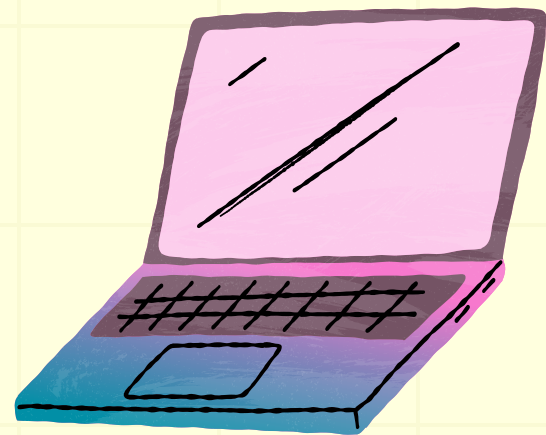

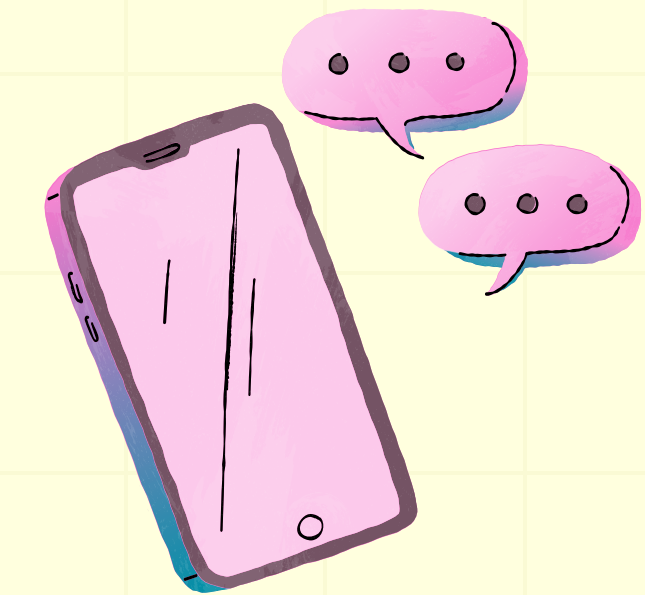

Use slang with friends, but keep formal language for school essays and emails!

Do not let texting replace your real-life conversation!

Thank you for your attention!

We hope you enjoyed it

Antea Opuhač, 3.c
Leona Horvat, 3.d
Veronika Bešić, 3.d
Asja Hodžić, 3.d